

Anthony Tran, PT, DPT

Physical Therapist

Hometown: Los Angeles, CA

Bachelor's Degree: University of Southern California – Bachelor of Science in Kinesiology

Graduate Degree: University of Southern California – Doctorate of Physical Therapy

Anthony 'Tony' Tran was born and raised in Los Angeles, California and attended the University of Southern California for both his bachelor's and Doctorate degrees. He started his career in the outpatient orthopedic and sports setting, working with a variety of patients, ranging from elite high school/college athletes to professional athletes to the elderly.

He later transitioned into the hospital setting, starting off with the inpatient acute care then settling for many years in the inpatient acute rehabilitation setting. In that setting, he worked with patients who had suffered stroke, spinal cord injuries, traumatic brain injuries and many other neurological diagnoses. During that time, he also worked with patients with amputations as well as recovery from live organ transplants. His passion and interest in neurological disorders was further strengthened during this time and he continued to pursue this passion with further education covering Parkinson's Disease (LSVT BIG, PWR! – Parkinson Wellness Recovery), NDT (Neuro-Developmental Treatment) as well as Vestibular courses.

Tony later moved to Orange County and left a lead physical therapist in the hospital setting to become clinic director in an outpatient vestibular and balance clinic to further his knowledge and experience with dizziness and other vestibular diagnosis. He has now transitioned here to Mobile Therapy Specialists to continue working with patients of all diagnosis, getting to know them personally in their home setting and working more within the community.
