

Keanu Andico PT, DPT

Physical Therapist

Hometown: Carson, CA

Bachelor's Degree: UCLA – Biochemistry

Graduate Degree: UC San Francisco / San Francisco State University – Doctorate of Physical Therapy

Keanu was introduced to the world of physical therapy after suffering a debilitating knee injury during undergraduate work at UCLA. An MRI a month later revealed a previously dislocated and fractured kneecap. He followed doctor's orders by undergoing surgery involving screws in his knee and by attending physical therapy for a few months. From initially hopping on crutches to later shooting hoops and running around the track, Keanu learned just how gratifying and essential physical therapy could be.

Five years later, Keanu graduated with his Doctorate of Physical Therapy from UC San Francisco. Now, he is equipped with eight years of combined physical therapy experience, three of those years working full time as a licensed therapist in outpatient orthopedic settings throughout the Inland Empire. He has developed a particular interest working with patients with active lifestyles who are dealing with chronic pain and/or have undergone orthopedic surgery.

However, no matter who he works with, Keanu prioritizes the patient's unique needs to create an individualized plan of care. He understands that no two patients are the same, that quality care is of utmost importance, and that the patient's needs always come first.

In his free time, Keanu enjoys traveling, hiking, and posting online reviews of new restaurants. He is in constant search of recommendations so feel free to share any of your personal favorites!
